In each unit of cavalry and infantry.—One officer as instructor; two non-commissioned officers as assistant instructors.

In the Royal Artillery.—One officer as instructor at stations where there are two or more companies of garrison artillery. When there are less than two companies the instruction will be conducted by the officer instructor of the nearest line battalion, who will consult officers commanding companies as to the most convenient hours for carrying on the instruction. A non-commissioned officer will be appointed as assistant instructor as follows:—

(i.) In the mountain artillery.—To each battery stationed separately.

(ii.) In the garrison artillery.—To each company, and to the Sierra Leone detachment.

1125. Before the unit is called upon to send an officer or non-commissioned officer to the school, seven weeks' notice will be given to the unit by the deputy-assistant adjutant-general for signalling. This will give sufficient time for their requisite preliminary training, which should comprise at least 30 working days, each of four practices of an hour each by day, and one of an hour by night.

1126. The system laid down in the "Signalling Instructions," and taught at the School of Signalling at Aldershot, is to be adhered to. As the signallers of one corps may at any time be called upon to communicate with those of another identity of system is absolutely necessary.

1127. The training of signallers in mountain batteries and companies of garrison artillery will be carried out by the officer commanding Royal Artillery in the district, who will be responsible that the proper establishment of signallers is maintained. There will be no establishment of signallers in horse and field artillery.

1128. In units provided with certificated instructors classes will be formed for regimental instruction. Each class at its commencement will consist of one officer, one corporal or lance-corporal, and at least 14 privates, and those unlikely to make good signallers will be returned to duty after the first week's instruction. Members of the class when under instruction or employed on signalling, will be relieved from all duties which interfere with the course of instruction. The greatest care on the part of the instructor must be used to secure that no man is reported as a qualified signaller unless he is perfectly fit to fulfil all the required duties. Requisitions for stationery required for these classes should be included in the annual demand made by commanding officers.

1129. The holders of signalling appointments are to be struck off regimental duty when employed with a class, or on brigade practice. All vacancies in these appointments are to be immediately reported through the General Officer Commanding to the deputy-assistant adjutant-general for signalling at Aldershot, with a view to the training of other officers and non-commissioned officers.

1130. Commanding officers will be held responsible for their signallers being thoroughly trained in heliograph, lamp, flag, and semaphore, and for the number of their signallers and supernumeraries being up to establishment and fit for inspection at any time during the year. The regimental signallers will have three days' and the supernumeraries one day's practice weekly throughout the year. When two or more units are quartered at the same station, brigade practice will also take place, under the superintendence of a selected instructor. General Officers Commanding will, from time to time, test the efficiency of the signallers.

1131. Four signallers are to be specially selected from each squadron of cavalry regiments on the higher establishment; three from each squadron of household cavalry and regiments on the lower establishment, or at stations abroad; two from each reserve troop or depot; and six from each battalion of infantry. At least two supernumeraries per service squadron and one per company are to be trained in order to replace men becoming non-effective. None of these signallers are to be above the rank of corporal, and not more than four corporals (or lance-corporals, unless appointed after the last annual inspection) in any cavalry regiment, or two in any infantry battalion, are to be employed as such. The number of specially selected signallers includes the junior assistant instructor. Officers commanding regiments of cavalry are responsible that at least two of their officers are in possession of a certificate from the school of signalling.

1132. In the mountain artillery the number of signallers will be three per battery. In the garrison artillery, the whole of the telephonists will be trained as signallers with a minimum of at least four per company (see paragraph 1127). Not more than one signaller per battery, company, or detachment, Royal Artillery, is to be a bombardier or an acting bombardier, unless appointed after the last annual inspection).

1133. Except in the Royal Artillery, the signallers of each unit at home will be inspected annually by the deputy-assistant adjutant-general for signalling, by his assistant, or by a qualified officer holding a certificate, and specially selected by the General Officer Commanding. A report on the proficiency or otherwise of the unit inspected, will, after each inspection, be forwarded on Army Form B 225 by the deputy-assistant adjutant-general for signalling to the General Officer Commanding, who, should he deem it necessary, will bring any special point to notice in a report to the War Office. The annual inspection abroad will be conducted by a qualified officer holding a certificate, specially selected each year by the General Officer Commanding. These inspections will be held in time to admit of the results being received by the deputy-assistant adjutant-general for signalling not later than the 31st October in each year, and a nominal roll of each unit examined will be forwarded at the same time. The signallers of the units which are shown in the annual report of the deputy-assistant adjutant-general for signalling as having qualified, will be entitled to wear the badges and receive the grant authorized by the Royal Warrant for Pay, etc. No prize will be issued, however, before the prize voucher is received from the deputy-assistant adjutant-general for signalling, who is alone empowered to issue this voucher. The signallers and supernumeraries of any corps which fails to qualify at the annual inspection will not be permitted to wear badges for the year.

The service messages and all papers connected with the inspection will be sealed on the ground, and forwarded unchecked to the deputy-assistant adjutant-general for signalling, for award of points.

In the Royal Artillery, the inspection of signallers will be carried out under the orders of the officer commanding the Royal Artillery in the district, who will also be responsible for the granting of badges to qualified signallers who attain the standard of proficiency laid down in the "Signalling Instructions." In the garrison artillery all telephonists drawing extra-duty pay as such, will also be instructed in signalling. Prizes for signallers of mountain and garrison artillery will be granted in accordance with Article 1133 of the Royal Warrant for Pay, etc.

1134. At the end of each quarter officers commanding units (other than Royal Artillery) will send direct to the deputy-assistant adjutant-general for signalling, Aldershot, a list of the officers and non-commissioned officers of the units under their command who are in possession of signalling certificates, stating the date of the certificate, where it is obtained, how the holder is employed, and whether he would be available for signalling duties in the field.

436. In the event of any men, in excess of the established quota, volunteering for the Militia Reserve, the commanding officer will report the fact, at least two weeks before the termination of the training, to the General Officer Commanding, who may authorize the enlistment of supernumeraries, provided the total quota for the whole of the units of the same arm in the district is not exceeded.
